Basis of preparation

How the figures in this statement are produced. The same calculations drive the bank's own screens, so the statement and the record it is taken from cannot disagree.

Source and scope. The statement is drawn from the bank's register of units and nominal held on your behalf as selling agent, the settled movements behind each position, the prices published for each product, and the bank accounts you have connected. Assets you hold elsewhere appear where your relationship manager recorded them, at the value recorded; the bank does not price them and they are not part of the performance figures. The valuation date is the bank's business date, 16 Sept 2026.

Valuation. Each position is valued at the last price available on or before the valuation date: a mutual fund at the net asset value per unit of its share class; a bond or sukuk at its clean price per hundred of nominal, with interest earned shown separately; a time deposit at principal, with interest from the day it was placed; a listed fund at its closing price; a structured product at its quote where one exists and otherwise at par.

Comparatives. Positions are shown on the valuation date, the last day of the previous month and the last day of the previous year, each at the prices published for that date and the units held that day. The result is shown for the month to date, the whole previous month and the year to date.

Relationship balance and net assets. The total relationship balance is the market value of the securities and placements held for you. Net assets add interest earned and not yet paid. Cash in bank accounts is reported beside the balance and never inside it. Units set aside for a goal remain part of the balance.

Result. Interest is counted in the period it was earned. A gain on a sale is the proceeds less the average cost of the units sold. The change in value of what is still held is the rest of the movement in value once money added and taken out are removed. Fees and taxes are those charged on the period's transactions.

Time weighted return. Daily returns are taken with the day's contributions and withdrawals removed, so money moving in or out is not counted as performance, and are chain linked into an index that starts at 100. This is the method used to judge a manager or a strategy.

Benchmark. The portfolio is compared with the benchmark of the model portfolio named in your investment policy statement, Balanced growth benchmark (the benchmark of the Balanced growth model), rebased to 100 on the first day of the period. Fees are not deducted from the benchmark.

Risk measures. Volatility is the annualized standard deviation of daily returns on 250 trading days a year. The Sharpe ratio uses a risk free rate of 5.75% a year. Maximum drawdown is the deepest fall from a running peak in the period. Tracking error and the information ratio are measured against the benchmark.

Goals. A goal's chance of success is the share of outcomes that reach its target by its date in a simulation of monthly returns drawn from the expected return and volatility of the model it is measured against, with the contributions of its plan.

Cash flow. Operating flows are read from bank accounts connected to core banking and from entries your relationship manager recorded where the bank cannot see the account. Investing flows are settlements in the register. Amounts are whole rupiah and columns add to their totals.
